Head, ENEL X Digital Hub, Italy

Tomás R. Blázquez is enthusiast of business transformation achieved by the synergy between human talent, innovation and technology management.

For more than 20 years, he has conducted strategic projects in telecommunications, infrastructure, information systems, and other areas of technology, which have given him the managerial experience and the ability to lead teams focused on success. Mr Blázquez has held various roles within the Enel Group, including the Head of ICT Latin America and Head of Application Development and Maintenance.

Mr Blázquez began his professional career in the Enel group in 2010, at the newly acquired Endesa, as distribution and market systems director. In 2014 he became Head of ICT South America, directing approximately 400 employees in a multicultural work environment, defining and developing ICT strategies aligned with customer and business needs.

In 2016 he became Head of ICT Solution Center Holding and Services, guiding the design, development and testing of business solutions with an end-to-end perspective, ensuring alignment with the company strategy as a single point of contact, to ensure responsibility for ICT solutions.

Today Mr Blázquez is Head of Digital Hub Enel X and Head of Digital Solutions South America; and directs the design and development of the various digital platforms. He is also in charge of integrating the acquired companies in order to enhance their skills in the search for acceleration and synergies. He manages a group of 200 professionals all over the world (from Chile to the United States and India) and manages an annual budget of 300 million euros.
